A former Olympic athlete, Alina Kabaeva is now at the top of the hierarchy of Vladimir Putin's regime. In June 2005, she, among other pop and sports stars, signed the infamous "Letter in support of the verdict to the former managers of the Yukos oil company" approving the politically motivated conviction of Mikhail Khodorkovsky and Platon Lebedev. As a State Duma deputy from the ruling United Russia party, Kabaeva successively followed the party's fluctuations: the last bill she signed was about labeling NGOs critical of the Kremlin policies as "foreign agents". This law, adopted in response to the growth of protest activity since 2011, marked a government attack on independent civil society structures, aiming at their discredit and creating legal prerequisites for their prosecution. Kabaeva voted for a few of these controversial laws that were speedily adopted in 2012 and 2013. Kabaeva also participated in the creation of the so-called "Dima Yakovlev Law", popularly called the "law of scoundrels", which, among other things, forbade Americans to adopt Russian children, including those terminally ill.
